Preface

The present volume, Future-Forward Research: A Quarterly Compendium, comprises selected papers presented at the Two-Day Future-Forward Research Conference: Global Trends and Interdisciplinary Innovation. The conference was conceived as a scholarly platform to encourage academic dialogue, promote interdisciplinary research, and facilitate the exchange of innovative ideas addressing contemporary global challenges.

The compendium reflects the central theme of the conference by bringing together original research contributions from diverse disciplines. The scope of the volume extends across the humanities, social sciences, sciences, management, and technology, highlighting forward-looking perspectives, emerging research methodologies, and integrative approaches that respond to evolving academic and societal needs.

The conference witnessed active participation from researchers and academicians representing more than twenty states across India, along with international participation from West Africa (Ghana). This wide geographical and disciplinary representation underscores the academic significance of the conference and its role in fostering inclusive and globally informed research engagement.

All manuscripts included in this volume were selected through a single-blind peer-review process. Submissions were evaluated by subject experts on the basis of originality, relevance to the conference theme, methodological rigor, and adherence to ethical and academic standards. Only papers that met the prescribed quality benchmarks were accepted for publication in this proceedings volume.

It is hoped that this compendium will serve as a valuable academic resource and contribute meaningfully to ongoing scholarly discourse and future research endeavours.
